INTRODUCTION

Gorgona is the most northern island of seven Tuscany Archipelago and inside it contains the souls of a prison, of a farm and of a natural park.

Since 1869, the prison has always been an agricultural and zootechnical area.

The presence of animals has been an important resource, not only from an economic point of view, but also as a psychological and social wealth. In 1993 the Hahnemannian homeopathic medicine to animals' care advantage was introduced.

AIMS

On the occasion of a research made by Tuscany Region on the Complementary Medicin, in 2005, the benefits derived from that method and from its view about vital phenomena were proved.

METHOD

Gorgona island is un biological and human complex ecosystem. Therefore, un ecological and global approach was adopted in this retrospective study (17 years of analysis period).

Qualitative and quantitative dates were collected. 2 sub-periods were compared:

- a) pre-homeopathic period: 1988-1993
- b) homeopathic period: 1994-2004

CONCLUSIONS

Homeopathy contributed to improve productions, animals' health and especially succeeded in connecting the island with the outern world. The work reintegration for a former prisoner and the beginning of a homeopathic training for a few doctors of the medical teamwork in Gorgona were some of the wide ranging results amenable to that cure opportunity.
